

About Michelle

Helping others and sharing information are at the heart of everything Michelle Idler does. From IT specialist, to teacher, to writer, her passion for service shows through her work.

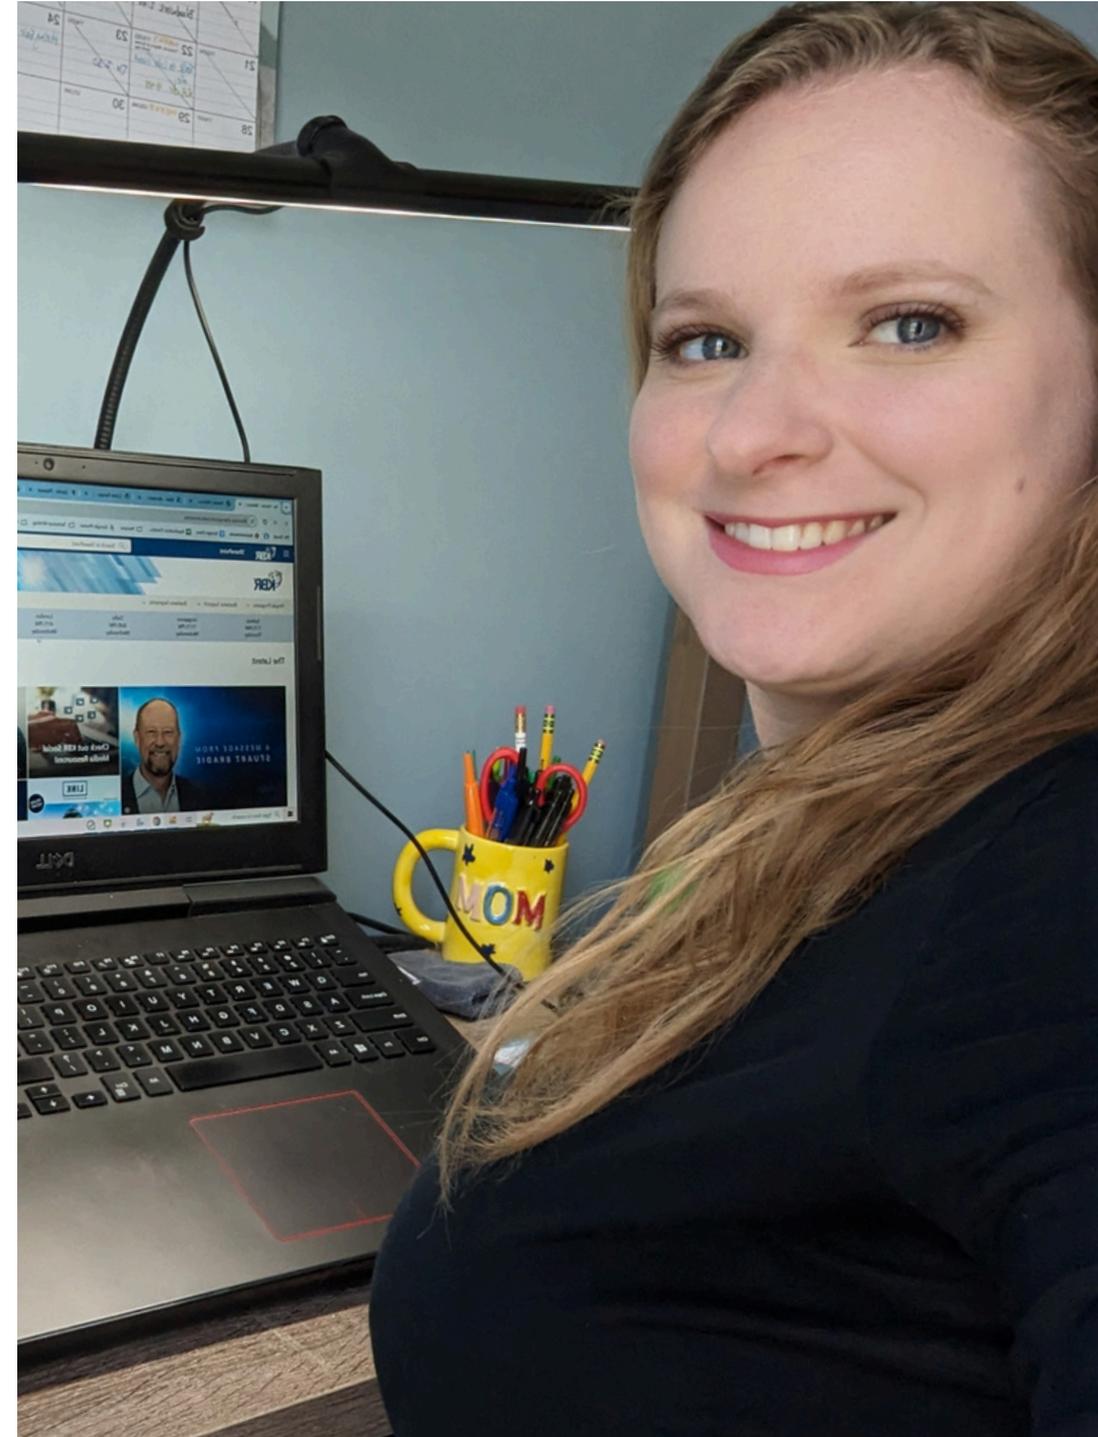

From a young age, Michelle Idler always wanted to help people. After graduating from Moorestown High School in 2007, she began college with a major in Education. After marrying a service member, moving away from school, and quickly becoming a mother, her career aspirations were put on hold, and eventually began to shift.

Michelle began studying Information Technology on her own, while raising her four children. Soon, she had earned several industry certifications and began work as an IT specialist in 2015. "I felt like I had reclaimed a piece of myself," says Michelle, "I was ready to build my own career and follow my dreams." After working for the local public school as both an IT technician and a long-term substitute teacher in a special needs classroom, Michelle finally realized her greatest passion: writing.

A career pivot from IT technician to IT technical writer motivated Michelle to return to school many years later, to complete her education in Communications.

She currently works for Leidos, a Fortune-500 federal contractor, as a Junior Technical Writer and is studying Media Writing in order to further diversify her skillset.

Michelle writes mainly for educational purposes, but also enjoys website copy and journaling for self-development.

Advent Health IT Releases New AI-Powered Health Assessment Tool to Improve Patient Outcomes

Patients of Advent Health IT now have access to AI-driven medical care through the online health portal.

Patients can receive medical assessments faster than ever before, through the powerful new AI tool.

AI-driven technology can assess symptoms of illness and injury and suggest diagnoses and treatments for every known ailment.

The technology can also locate and recommend specialty services to meet patients' unique needs. Connections to lab services, physical therapy, and other needs can be scheduled directly by the AI.

"This new technology can change the face of telemedicine and reach patients in new ways and with new insights, to dramatically improve patient experiences and outcomes," says Dr. Sheila Williams, a long-time provider with Advent Health IT.

This proprietary and ethically guided AI model provides expert and multifaceted assessment of patients and is monitored by board-certified medical experts to ensure safety and reliability of results.

"We are thrilled to offer this new tool to empower our patients and to provide more intuitive medical care than traditional telemedicine services, all while ensuring that the technology is sound and our patients are receiving the best care possible," says Dr. John Thomas, the Head of AI Development at Advent Health.

Dr. Thomas also says this is just the first of many new AI-driven technologies becoming available to their patients. Other programs including personalized health plans and cost-reduction incentive programs will be arriving soon for enrollees.

Advent Health IT is a virtual healthcare provider that has been enhancing medical care through advances in technology since 1998. They currently serve over 1.2 million patients and 15,000 medical practices worldwide.
